“ So sorry to read of the loss of your loved one, Charles. He will be missed indeed. Losing a loved one is never easy. James 4:8 invites you to "Draw close to God and he will draw close to you." I sincerely encourage you to do so and he will sustain you at this sadden time.

“ As you start to get older you start to realize your life twists and turns over time. This twisting brings you the opportunity to share life with many different people. Naturally you look back at those that had a positive impact on you and you can only hope that you had s similar impact on their lives. For the most part, you will never know. Charlie was one of those positives in my life. His patience whit and kindness were always on full display especially when he was having a down day. Thank you Lord for people like Charlie. There aren't enough of them. That's why it hurts when they pass on and leave us. My best to his family and friends. Tom N.

“ Charlie Bush was one of a kind. He lived his life just like he drove that old maroon Honda Gold Wing. One morning years ago, he called me and said, "lets take a ride." When we got to the end of our ride, we made a 180 degree turn at the Chesapeake Bay Bridge/Tunnel. Charlie loved and respected anyone that was in the military, especially those of us who served in Vietnam. He was my very dear friend; a friend who would have taken a bullet for me. And I would have taken one for him. Riding my motorcycle will never be the same. I will forever cherish that crazy and wonderful dear friend of mine.
