“ Hi - we do nto know one another. For the past 8 1/2 years however, I have a new habit. I read the obituary column pretty regularly. Something I began after my young son died in 2001. When I saw the piece on your son, our boys might have known one another. My son Nicholas Deubert was 2 years ahead of your boy at Glasgow. He died in 2001 at the age of 19 in a car accident. it is possible that their paths crossed at some point. Your boy souds like he was a good kid. ALthough there were some bumps in Nick's young life, he was a good kid too. I hope they get to meet. You may despise hearing this phrase now and for awhile but if you ever want to meet someone else who shares this memory, I can do that. There will be tears but we will leave with smiles.

“ Dave,

We really miss you, more than you will ever know. We still remember you and will forever. We all love you, Dave.

You and I have had some bumpy times, but we have also had many good times. I am going to miss wrestling with you (real and video games). I'm gonna miss you calling me Charlie Brown (even though I used to hate it when you called me that). I'm gonna miss listening to music with you and watching movies waiting for you to tell me what the song is called or that you have the movie. I'm going to miss your short stories about your favorite bands and what each band member was and what their name is.

Dave, I miss you. I hope you are now both safe and happy where you are now.

With Love and Regard,

Chuckie##imported-begin##Charles Wesley Cerasari Jr##imported-end##
