“ A few years after we stopped working together, I was driving a crane on 295, in NJ. I noticed a tractor trailer overtaking me. As the cabs came together, I looked over, it was Zip. He gave me a head nod, and a big grin, as he sped off. To this day, it still brings a smile to my face. Although today, tears are mixed in.....I will miss you, my friend.

“ It's taken days for all of this to process and me to be able to put it words. You are the greatest friend and brother one can have. You would bend over backwards to do what you could to help someone out. Sitting here left with my memories. I still remember the day we met we were at the Eagles club didn't know each other at all you invited to your house sitting there on my bike waiting for you to get your car you pull around in a white work van didn't think much about it until I pulled out to follow you and seen a license plate that read FTW666 after that all I could think about was the guy from american history X and what am I getting into. With only red stag and milk or tea to drink lol (red stag and sweet tea makes a great drink) I walked away with a great new friend and later down the road great brother. From hours of late night, early morning phone conversation of bikes, guns, women, music, firefighting, even current events, history, and politics. To the (only some will get this) Jarassic Park moments. Introducing me to a girl who would become my wife and mother of my child. The care and half scared look from a badass when you first picked up my few month old son. Family cookouts and family day at the board walk in OCMD.

Zip you were a great friend and brother to many people and even a asshole at times you will be truly missed.

R.I.P brother
