“ Our son Rodger reminded me of this memory just About a month ago. Those that knew Rick well, would be familiar with his keen ability to replace some song lyrics with those he selected. But he Also would hang onto some songs and sing them Whether they were playing on the radio or not. Rodger called me Monday because he'd heard the G& R song , “Patience.” Rick sang this in a certain sort of way, he would drag it out you could tell he was trying to sound like Axel. As though he was sharing with you to be patient. And he would sing it whenever you were in a situation where you need to be patient. If you were in a grocery line it was too long, Or if you were at a red light on the motorcycle and it was a really hot summer day and that light just stayed red just a little too long. I love that memory. It ends with him singing “ yeeeeaaaaaaahhhhhh”He would not sing further. I loved to hear him sing. That was one of the first just beautiful and fun memories that I could have. I miss him so much that I couldn't see through it for a long time. Now I can hear him sing.

“ I'll share a memory of Rick that repeated many times. I was a commodore for Northeast yachting CLUB and had done my time through the ranks, but each year every single yacht club on the Chesapeake has a festive and formal ball for the Commodore. Voters . Boaters are by nature partiers . Ricks dazzle typically attracted the eye of 90% of the women in the room. What would start by him seeing a single older woman and asking her to dance would turn into a line of people to dance with him ricks dazzle typically attracted the eye of 90% of the women in the room. What would start by him seeing a single older woman and asking her to dance would turn into a line of people to dance with them or a circle, and him looking like John Travolta from Saturday night fever in the middle. I shared him because what he did was wonderful. He made every woman in the room feel loved if they didn't appear to be already. I loved him for that.
We had such good times and he changed the dynamic of a ball By smiling and loosening his tie.
I love you Rick Warwick. You are an amazing man and I will miss every day for the rest of my life. I love you so very much and I know so many more will miss you.
Love always, you are my heart
Dollie (Robin)
